

Professor Aisha Holloway is Head of Nursing Studies at The University of Edinburgh and the Established Chair in Nursing Studies, she is also Co-Director of the Edinburgh Global Nursing Initiative. With a strong interest in nurse political leadership both nationally and globally, Aisha works at the interphase between nurse-led health and social care research and the influencing of health and social care related policy. She previously held an Hon Nurse Consultant Research & Policy Advisory post on Alcohol Research & Policy at Scottish Government and has given written and oral evidence to Scottish Parliament.

Her programme of research, funded by MRC-PHIND, NIHR-PH, CSO, ESRC, NIHR-GCRF, The Burdett Trust, aims to reduce the risks and harms of alcohol in society, influencing and shaping alcohol policy alongside, development of an evidence base focused on global political nurse leadership. Aisha is also Programme Director for Research and Evidence for the Nursing Now Campaign, Adjunct Professor Johns Hopkins School of Nursing, Trustee of the Florence Nightingale Foundation Board and a Harvard Business School alumni.

E · A · N · S